TONOPAH EXTENSION HAS TREASURE CHAMBERS

VISION OF WEALTH BAFFLES THE PEN

Depth Beneath Present Levels
Will be Explored by the Big Company

The Tonopah Extension is the biggest silver mine in the world today. The Bonanza is convinced of this fact because it has had visual proof. A tape was placed on a shaft yesterday and it was found to be twenty-six feet in length. The compass was also consulted and it was discovered that the ore lens was the farthest west in Tonopah. Where in the name of Heaven does the wealth extend to the westward?

Lots and lots of years ago Tom Lockhart sank a shaft and made his home in a dugout, where the old cemetery was then the westerly out-post of the district. Charley Schwab came along and bought the shaft and instructed the miners to dump their waste on the dugout so that Mr. Lockhart would be forced to seek more sanitary apartments. It was a big gamble when the No. 1 shaft of the Extension was sunk for it was a half mile from the Mizpah croppings and there were nothing but tin cans, broken bottles and sagebrush on the surface to indicate mineralization.

But the ore came in view at depth and the property was shortly one of the big producers of the camp. It was found that the ore bodies trended toward the westward and the No. 2 shaft was started. It was sunk perpendicularly for 950 feet and ore measures were developed on that level. But the Murray vein trended away at an angle of about 45 degrees and an incline was sent after it.

At 1250 feet a crosscut was thrown out and the values were found. For a distance of 470 feet the lens was followed. It was the usual lenticular shoot and it was on an average sixteen feet in width. The ledge was walled with West End rhyolite and was firm and rich.

Then the incline shaft went to the 1350 and a crosscut was sent out to
